Increased survivals have changed the life perspective of HIV infected people and influenced their reproductive aspirations. Improved PMTCT regimens and access to care is ensuring that most HIV exposed children would be uninfected, and the few infected would survive longer. Parenting becomes a challenging task for HIV infected parents. Apart from the routine issues in parenting there are additional HIV related issues to which children would seek explanations. These will have deleterious effects if not handled properly. Adherence with ART is an unavoidable issue that might raise the unrest in the family environment. Parents are required to be capacitated to deal with this. The realm of routine HIV counseling needs additional inputs with effective strategies for capacity building of care providers. -Presentations related to children: ▪ Facilitator: Sanjeevani Kulkarni Venue: Reed Messe Wien, Mini Room 2

Thursday 16:30-18:00h	THSY11 -The Role of Families in HIV Prevention, Treatment, Care and Support -Symposium ▪ Chairs: Stefan Germann, John Miller ▪ Description: To date responses to the epidemic have been largely individualistic, bypassing families. The notion of 'families' has been revolutionized. Families now extend beyond biology, religion and gender, and law, to reflect the intimate social groups on which all human beings depend for their survival and succor. Families that carry the heaviest load in treating, caring for and protecting children and other members directly affected by the epidemic play a fundamental, but as yet not fully recognized role, in the prevention of HIV transmission. Families are also important for especially marginalized groups. Their children are amongst the most stigmatized and under-served in the world and family networks are frequently the last bastion of support for individuals in especially marginalized groups. Attention to families extends AIDS prevention, treatment, care and support, from the individual, to social groups as it should always have been. -Presentations related to children: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ "Children of especially marginalised groups: family vulnerability and the prevention of vertical transmission" - Marina Adamyán ▪ "Prevention of vertical transmission : the role of families" - Elaine J.
